Remembering the days of steam on British Railways 50th Anniversary Special Edition

11 August 1968 was a significant day in the lives of railway enthusiasts and indeed railway workers. This was the day that was to see the end of Standard Gauge steam on the British Rail network. The famous 15 guinea special organised by BR was certainly intended to be the last steam hauled passenger train on the national network.

Maurice Burns, who first reached the Settle and Carlisle line by cycling 100 miles when just fourteen years old recalls his many adventures in capturing the final days of BR steam. This included the 15 Guinea special on 11 August 1968. Maurice, a Mechanical Engineer by profession, became the Chief Mechanical Engineer of the North Eastern Locomotive Preservation Group, helping to restore LNER K1 No 2005 and A2 pacific No 60532 Blue Peter for operation over the line. The book concludes with a fascinating review of the past forty years of the preservation era, with some of the finest steam photography of engines past and present - some of which we may never see in action again.

To mark this 50th Anniversary we are pleased to be publishing A Passion for Steam on The Settle & Carlisle Line in two editions: a standard softcover volume and a Subscribers' Limited Edition (with 32 additional pages). Subscribers can opt to have their name listed in the Limited Edition.

The closing date for receipt of orders is 17 August 2018
